Chapter 1 by -

Write a poem depicting some aspect of life: Birth, Death, Love, Hate, Joy, Sorrow, etc.

Please do not do the same topic twice!

Death

It comes to all no matter if you are big or small

And takes away your breathe while you lay

Quiet and calm in a casket with

Oh how sweet Life now seems While you are my Very heart's beat.

I could not imagine
A time when in This life you were Not an attraction.

It seems we are Going very far
In a flying world
Like a shooting star.

To be with each other Forever and ever, to Never be separated -
Not even in eternity.

Chapter 3 by Jenny Neill

Sorrow

There are two kinds of sorrow
One for today
And one for tomorrow

The Present sorrow is a fragile song
Easy to break, temporary,
Flimsy but strong

Twilight of the

The Future is now with Story Wars

beyond repair
to where you want nothing to ever touch you

You will carry these burdens
Until you die
Don't let death lure you in

Let your time come
At it's own pace
Because you are stronger than some

Stronger than all
No matter what they say
You will never fall

Sorrow will tempt
Sorrow will plead
But sorrow's pathetic
It just wants to feed

Feed off your regrets
Feed off your sins
Feed off your soul
Trying to win

Trying to take over
Trying to thrive
But my dear reader,
Don't let it survive

Be brave

Be wise

Be better than sorrow
Don't let it win

Don't create sorrow

Out of past sin.

Chapter 4 by AshleyLawson

Pain.

The darkness haunts me.

The shadows ask to play.

The death stalks me.

The pain comes back each day.

Your kiss wants me.

Your arms envelop me.

Your smile taunts me.

Your love continues to develop.

My monsters devour me.

My hurt just doesn't go away.

My thoughts empower me.

My demons decide to stay.

It tries to take over.

It tries to make me crazy.

It tries to thrive.

It strangles me with its cords of daisies.

I try to survive.

I try to be human.

I try to just stay alive.

I may as well be heading to my own execution.

And often scares away,
The one to feel his awkward touch,
And mask the pain of dismay.

He seeks a love once unknown,
A life he has forgotten,
Or rather, just outgrown,
And left it for the rotten.

A time when life was sweet,
And one should play in dirt,
When everyday brought a treat,
Of lumpy cold dessert.

The ring of bells chimmed,
And he knew it to be his friends,
'Can Jerry come outside?'
They sang without end.

But now they were also lost,
In a sea of blank faces,
If only he had known the cost,
Of when one suddenly ages.

His time is now spent,
Looking through old books,
Ones he'd usually relent,
Ones that gave him spooks.

Of figures clouded by dust,
Though one was wiped clean,

A woman dressed in beauty

He could feel her like an angel that

But who on earth was she?

He raised the photo to the light,
And studied it intently,
"This gives me an awful fright",
"Why does she escape me?"

'Don't take it in such strife',
A voice would come soaring,
'Jerry, that's your wife',
'We do this every morning',

Chapter 6 by -

I Bid Thee Farewell

There is an easterly wind which blows me far,
far from thee.
I can feel it caressing face, hovering about me - like the wispy fog which clings to the sea in early morn.
It gathers round close as if to say "Do Not Forget" - as if I ever could...

Then it comes to me
like a pale ghost.
It creeps up behind,
takes me by the shoulders,

... and my heart breaks
... and my heart breaks
... then my head bows low
... and a deep sigh escapes my lips
... I know wonder

I fear farewells...

Chapter 7 by Magdalene

The End

The ending comes too soon
Just as the flowers begin to bloom
I don't know how it ends
But the music stops and the money spent

The words to the sky
What we've learned in a sigh
How it is we're asking why
But it ends and we try
And the plank still in my eye
The end comes tonight

Last chapter for these life poems
We read as we're heading home
Maybe there'll be another one Cause I think we already know who's one

Song

Just when you thought
There was no more light
Something blooms within you Shining
Growing

...

...
And for a moment time stops

And you realize

You're not scared of death
Because it is there in your life Rushing on Forever
And you breathe in its magic.

Just when you were going to Give up, Run away, Hide,
You feel once again love
Because it is there,
Etched in your heart
And you embrace it.

And the sorrow melts away
It is rising in you Like sunflowers facing the sun illuminating the world
By just a little bit.
And you are strong.

Strong to face the pain
that strangles you
That feeds on Your soul.
But it stays and builds a fire burning all the hurt

And the sorrow melts away

And you are strong

Remember what it lost

And you struggle
But it remains. And sings a tune
You remember still, but you remember
With a sweet taste,
With a magical lyrical beautiful powerful Song.

And it will never leave you. Never Bid thee farewell
Because it has reached into you soul and grabbed ahold.
It is a part of you. And even if it hurts sometimes. You can never leave it.

Music will hold your hand in your darkest times.
It will save help love be with You till...

the end
